THE STAR

PUBLISHED BY THE STUDENTS OF
HENDERSON COLLEGE
ARKADELPHIA, ARK.

VOLUME THREE—1907

WE PRESENT to you the third volume of "THE STAR," published by the students of Henderson College. "THE STAR" has been a crowning success from the first, but we believe this one to be the best yet. The students have shown an enlivened interest in its publication, and have been active in the preparation of matter, both illustrative and literary. To those who have shown an interest or rendered assistance in this work by word, suggestion, or otherwise, we wish to express our sincere appreciation. We cherish the ardent hope that the efforts of the Board of Editors will meet the hearty approval of all our friends.

Too much cannot be said of the great good which is being accomplished by the Y. W. C. A. Devotional meetings are held every Sunday afternoon. The first Sunday in each month being observed as Missionary Sunday. Every morning before breakfast a short prayer service is held by the girls in the Association Hall. The Y. W. C. A. of Henderson College was organized September 11, 1904. Soon afterward it was affiliated with the American Committee of Chicago, which combined with the Board of Woman's Christian Association of the United States in December, 1906, and is now known as the National Board of Young Women's Christian Association of the United States of America. Thus we are a part of the great world-wide movement.

GARLAND LITERARY SOCIETY

The Garland is now in her second year. We point with pride to the fact that in our first year, our representatives won both debate and medal at the Commencement Inter-Society Debate, and were awarded the highest number of points in the declamation contest. We have enrolled, during this year, forty-nine active members. We are a success now and hope to fulfill our mission in Henderson College life in the future.

THE RECORD

NOVEMBER the twenty-ninth, witnessed the close of the most prosperous foot ball season in the history of the College. At the first of the year our prospects looked very slim. But with the help of the College management, the Faculty, the business men of the town, and the girls of the College, we were able to secure the services of a coach. Our fondest hopes were realized in the person of Mr. J. H. Lassiter of the University of Nashville. All of the boys in school entered into the game with spirit. On this fact depends the entire success of the Varsity Eleven. Very few of the 1905 team returned. In the absence of Captain Wozencraft, half-back Mauldin was unanimously elected captain and again captain of the team of 1907.

The hard work was only a preparation for the future, as we are now preparing to turn out the fastest team in the State. All of the old fellows are coming back, and the services of quarter back Haygood, of the Vanderbilt University team of 1905, have been secured.

We opened up the season by the overwhelming victory of 26 to 0, in a game with Hendrix on the local gridiron, having the loyal support of rooters from both school and town.

The team next took a trip to Hot Springs, and in twenty minutes of play rolled up the score of 16—0. However, we might say in justice to the Hot Springs High School, that we outclassed their boys, and on account of the incompetency of the referee, left the field before the game was over.

The hardest struggle of the season was with Colonel Hall's champion squad of the A. M. A. We met them on the home grounds on the third of November. Although we fought a hard battle, they won by a score of 16—5, the only score made against them during the football season.

Two more games were scheduled, one with Hot Springs, and one with Draughon's Business College of Little Rock. On account of the inclemency of the weather both had to be called off.

The final struggle came on Thanksgiving day, when the local squad met the boys from the Louisiana Industrial Institute. Although they outweighed our team by about twenty pounds, we held them down to the hardest tug of the season. The game ended in a tie, with a score of 5—5.

The season was ended by a reception given in honor of the Ruston team in the College parlors.

Before the regular season opened we played several practice games, but on account of a bad arrangement of the men as to places we were not successful in our first games. Unfortunately we could arrange for but few games, these being confined to Hendrix College and A. M. A. of Little Rock. While we lost all the games with Hendrix, one of the games resulted in a score of 5 to 4 in the tenth inning. We closed the season with a game with A. M. A. which resulted in a score of 9 to 3 for Henderson. After having interchanged some players our team was much stronger, and we were making a creditable showing as indicated by our last game. To our regret the season closed too soon for us. We were making ourselves felt.

All things now point to a glorious victory in Athletics for next year. Henderson stands firm in the advocacy and practice of clean, straight athletics.

ADVANCE SHEETS OF THE HENDERSON COLLEGE DICTIONARY

ACUTE. A form of sensation often felt after seeing the report card.

AFFECTION. A peculiar attachment for either sex, but most frequently between the opposite.

BELL. A clanging noise heard twenty-five times a day which arouses intense anger early in the morning, and lulls to sleep at night.

CHAPEL. A place which you are invited, yea, urged, to visit every day. The One Hundredth and Nineteenth Psalm is offered as a reward to all who have the good fortune to be late.

DUDE. A masculine conglomeration.

DEPORTMENT. A variable approaching zero.

DRILL. A much sought pastime, very beneficial to boys, and not seriously harmful to girls.

ENERGY. A force possessed by Miss Parke, and directed chiefly toward organizing choruses, and harmony and sight reading classes.

FEAST. A nocturnal medley of all indigestible edibles, pickles and canned goods not included.

GUM. A costly luxury that Henderson cannot afford.

GUESS. A subterfuge resorted to when asked a question you do not know.

HAT. An air tight cranium protector.

INTELLECT. Closely akin to senior.

JOB. Apply to Mrs. Meek for Psalms.

KNOWLEDGE. A commodity cornered by the Solomon Trust Company. This accounts for the high price at Henderson.

LUCK. A very fickle animal.

MATRIMONY. A post-graduate course—not offered at Henderson.

NOVEL. Something out of the ordinary, for instance: a Henderson girl who flirts.

OVERSLEEP. Its labor is sweet, but its fruit is bitter.

PRUNES. A fruit less expensive than strawberries and found more often on a boarding school table.

QUESTIONS. A method sometimes used by students who don't know their lessons.

REMORSE. Another word for minus.

SCIENCE. Derived from Greek "scio," to groan, and English "ence," a cause, therefore a cause to groan.

TRIBULATIONS. Something you have to pass through, namely, Psychology.

UNIFORM. A garb that envelops a young lady or gentleman. Color, gray, tan or white; trimming, collar and tie.

VANDERBILT. A center toward which we are all drawn.

WANTS. Indispensable articles for girls, such as gum, onions, pickles, short sleeves, and all shades of bright colored ribbons for neck wear. For boys, candy, sofa pillows, and handkerchief bags.

EXERCISE. Verb, meaning to circumnavigate the campus.

YAWN. An involuntary movement. See chapel.

ZERO. A point from which everything except boys and girls have a tendency to go.

ODE TO THE OLD PARLOR FURNITURE

Henderson has not used thee gently
Since within its friendly portals,
As a young and guileless student,
First I met thee.

Thou hast ever been our helper,
We, alas, have left thee helpless,
Yet at least in a far land
Art thou welcome.

Fare thee well, Old Parlor Furniture,
Gone to a distant land,
Gone for thy declining days
Are now at hand.

Time has left its mark upon thee;
There are scars of faithful service
Made by hands that grasped thee rudely at receptions.

Scratched and broken now thou art,
Ragged are thy velvet draperies,
Streaked, spotted in the hardships
Of thy service!

Aye, but surely thou recallest
Days departed, half forgotten,
When a stranger first I wandered
Through the parlors.

Thou recallest glorious moments,
When thy arms of help and comfort,
Smoothed the careworn, troubled foreheads
Of our teachers.

And as the new is placed
In these large and vacant parlors,
Yet thy image still shall linger
In my memory.

Nominating Speech for Sister to "B. U."

INSTRUCTED Faculty of this renowned school, Hon. Deacon Hanson, and "grinning Mr. Chairman": Will you be so obliging and sacrificing as to condescend to allow me for a brief time, by the rotary motion of the paws over the ivory countenance of the clock, to spiel forth some utterances about one of the most illustrious things, undoubtedly, that ever struck the world in the face, regardless of the inclemency of the weather and the uncivilized quarter of the turning hemisphere on which it struck? When this revolving piece of nothing was hurled from the chronological order of events, it was with such sudden violence that it rattled the dishes, and in fact broke a few plates over on the other side of the world, but, luckily, the other side was underneath at the time.

Before I tell you what happened, let me give you a little history of the location in which it occurred. In a wooded grove of dear old Jeff Davis' Arkansas, in the remotest district of that State, Andrew county, was the scene of tumult. Andrew county, allow me to declaim, was named for one of its venerable citizens, for his noble deed during the strife between the "Yanks" and "Rebs," of rescuing an innocent little Yankee pig from the ponderous jaws of a pop-gun. And I know that you people are not so ignorant and dull of comprehension, as not to know how Arkansas became the property of Jeff Davis. For he is one of the most noted characters she has ever produced and succored as governor; one whose name will go down in history, written at the top of the roll of fame, as the "One-Gallus Man," "Moonshiner's Friend," and "The Convict's Pardoner."

So you see in such a renowned spot my story cannot help from seeming more glorious. The little log cabin seemed, on this eventful day, like a diamond surrounded by rubies instead of a cabin wrapped in the darkest pines. The day broke with a greater rattle than usual and the indispensable little tree toads almost split their throats trying to make the fact known that there was born in that vicinity a wee bundle of innocence, early destined to be a sister to a Bachelor of Ugliness. And as we look upon her rugged countenance today, it is marvelous, we say, that she has preserved so well her features for the never-to-be-forgotten day when she should know her fated partner in Henderson College, nineteen hundred and seven.

Before we give her over, let us go back and follow her from the beginning. We visit her earliest home—the cradle, and see her doing just as she does now when something goes wrong, screwing up her face. Thus, the once wee mouth was unfortunately stretched in its youthful days in uttering such pitiful cries of distress that the pines of the forest moaned in sympathy, and wafted her wailings on their balmy breezes to the frogs who inhabited the neighboring ponds. They caught up the sound and today you may hear the same melancholy notes and sympathetic moans which brings back the memory of this past event. When about five years of age she was sorely afflicted with phycho-physical-halucination of the brain, resulting from vacuum of the cranium, but with careful nursing she out-grew all this. At the gawky age of twelve, we see her in red calico, going to the little log cabin school house about two miles from her home; her flirting and enticing ways captivating all the hearts of the opposite sex, from the smallest lad of five, up to her school master of twenty-five.

Year by year she increased in statue and waxed hot in—temper! With a firm understanding she passed safely through the early requirements. Her nose was rather superfluously dabbed cat-a-cornered to her spacious mouth, and her monstrous ears permitted her to hear everything going on; over, under and all around. One day she heard her "paw" say she should go to Henderson College, and with great curiosity she met the fact. I will not undertake to tell you of her coming. She's here, and that's sufficient for you and enough for the glory of Henderson. But I will exert my oratorical energies enough to tell you that she has constantly walked uprightly the crooked and narrow ways of its requirements, goaded on by the urgent Faculty and the desire to become great. She has become great; so much so, that from a worthy throng of Philos she was chosen to be their candidate for "Sister to Bachelor of Ugliness."

And may I have the privilege to say in closing, that if B. U. actually meant what it stands for, "Bachelor of Ugliness," every boy, (with one exception, Bill Hanson) in this school would have to draw for the honor, and then it would come out a tie. Not so with the girls. It was an easy selection. Our honorable candidate for the grand, glorious Philomathean Society, I announce as none other than Miss Bessie Rhodes.

FARMER JOHN

Said little John H., Junior,
"Oh, pa, I'm skeered I'll ruin yer,
But I have a mighty longing in my heart;
I want to be a farmer,
Likewise a chicken-charmer—
Would you hand me out some dough to make a start?"

Said pa, "I guess I'll do it,
But I'm trembling lest I'll rue it,"
As he handed out some bills all crisp and new.
Then Johnny cried: "Oh, fine!
Now won't I cut a shine,
With that ideal poultry yard I have in view?"

Soon a hen house he erected,
Bought some poultry, choice, selected,
And lined some nests with straw all nice and warm;
Now daily you may view him
(For you really can't subdue him)
With a basket full of eggs upon his arm.

Character Sketch of Deacon Thweatt

EITHER space nor time permits us to go into details about the life of so famous a genius. But into the life of every great man some blood-curdling incident has entered. So it was with His Highness, the Deacon, of Chinquap'n Hollow. We will relate the most thrilling incident of his remarkable career.

It is a dark and stormy night; the silver moon has laid her head to rest behind a wild and wooly cloud, and darkness reigns over the land. Alone and unaccompanied plunges the Deacon into this chasm of darkness. Unheeded are the echoing hoots of the owl from "Sleepy Hollow," likewise the mournful call of the whip-poor-will. The Deacon is buried in deep thought. Desperation is tearing at his heart and he knows not what to do.

While buried in deep thought, an idea in some inexplicable way finds an entrance to his massive cranium. His purpose is fixed; he is bent upon a desperate deed. Cautiously he steals to the back gate of Earl Graves' back yard, and from his hip pocket he draws something—what is it?—ah! it is meat to bribe the faithful watch dog Towser.

And while Towser is pursuing his favorite pastime, the Deacon noiselessly raises the window and enters the kitchen. Success has almost crowned his efforts, his mission is almost fulfilled, and the adventure is nearly over. But listen! What is that "click," which comes from the darkness and strikes the Deacon dumb with fear and sets the icy chills playing leap-frog up and down his spinal column? Without warning the light is flashed and Graves shouts in stentorian tones: "Kind friend, would you oblige me by elevating your hands?" The Deacon hesitates—Bang!!! Bang!!! He has accidentally knocked two pans off the stove. Deacon, with terror in his face and pathos in his voice uttered this pleading cry for mercy: "O, pshaw, Graves!" On bended knee he begs mercy from his hard-hearted captor. The Deacon's plea touches Graves' heart, the shot gun is laid aside, and homeward plods the Deacon, once more released safe and sound from the jaws of death. Once more the moon awakes, the owl hoots, the whip-poor-will sends forth his mournful cry, and the Deacon lays his head to rest.

HAWKSHAW AND PEABODY

THE CHORUS CLASS

Each Saturday night the Chorus Class
Doth make the welkin ring;
With voices loud, and clear, and strong,
The boys and girls do sing.

The bassos open wide their mouths,
And thunder forth their tones;
The tenors shout such pleading yells,
That the North Wind gives loud groans.

The altos, led by Madeline,
The sopranos, too, excel;
But first and last and best of all,
Miss Parke, who leads us well.

"KNOCKS"

Announcements: The Sight Reading Class will meet at the usual hour.
Major D. W. Luten, the trick violinist, will give an exhibition in the auditorium next Monday evening at eight o'clock. Admission one dollar.

Mrs. Meek will chaperone a skating party at the Capitol Skating
Rink Tuesday afternoon from three until five p. m.

D. A.: "Does your wife miss you much."

J. M.: "No, she can throw as straight as I can."

Beryl: "What is Hattie Sage walking extra duty for?"

Lou: "For flirting with Bill Hanson."

Roy Dougan (at Mr. Key's gate): "Hello, anybody at home?"

Lena (within): "O, come on in, Roy, the dogs won't hurt you."

"Coming events cast their shadows before." How long a shadow will "Shorty" cast?

Mr. Williams: "Andrew, what are you and Frank going to do with that dog?"

Andrew H.: "We are going to give him to the fellow who can tell the biggest lie."

Mr. Williams: "Why, Andrew, don't you know it is wrong to lie? I never told a lie in my life."

Andrew H.: "Frank, I guess he gets the dog."

Ruth Brame: "One half of the world doesn't know what the other half is doing."

Mrs. Meek: "Well, it isn't your fault, dear."

Mr. Hinemon: "Where are you going John H.?"

John H. (with a dictionary under his arm): "I am going to church."

Mr. Hinemon: "Why are you taking a dictionary to church?"

John H.: "Because Bro. Rhodes is going to preach."

Mrs. Meek says beauty is only skin deep. Therefore beautify the skin.

Bessie (reading in German): "And she fell into his arms."

Mr. Mitchell: "That's correct."

Mr. Williams (in Latin class): "How does this sound: dam, das, dat, damus, datis, dant?"

Harry Gatling: "It sounds to me like cussin'."

Sam Parker to Charley: "Say, Charlie, how do you suppose we can ever get whiskey out of Ouachita County?"

Charlie: "Drink it up."

EPITAPHS

Here lies Gar-lip upon the lap of earth,
A kid to study and to work unknown;
Fair science frowned not on his humble birth,
And idleness marked him for her own.

Here lies the body of "UNCLE DUNK,"
He's buried here with the other junk.

Sleep on, little "Monk," among the blest,
You tickled a mule's heel, he did the rest.

Gus Ross sat on a hornet's nest,
He thought it was a pillow,
His family laid him down to rest,
Beneath a weeping willow.

Here lies Mrs. Meek, cold and dumb,
In a fit of rage she swallowed her gum.

KNOCKS—Continued

"WHEN"

When Mrs. Meek quits chewing gum;
When J. M. quits smoking cigarettes;
When Mitchell quits blushing;
When Major Luten and Miss Parke quit sparking;
When Wright Hogan quits studying;
When Cooper quits drilling extra-duty;
When Bessie Rhodes quits flirting with the boys;
When Will Locke quits flirting with the girls;
When Skip Adams ceases to think too highly of himself;
When receptions come twice a week;
When—well, when the moon turns green, by gum.

MAULDIN'S PRAYER

Bless Bob and his father, Mr. Ray,
Mr. Mitchell, John M., the Major and D. A.,
Help Chism Jett to chew his cud,
Make Hogan, Sam Murphy and Cooper good.

Bless the crap-shooters, and may they win,
Give them "seven eleven" from end to end.
Bless the card players, knockers and all,
Help the track team, and the season's baseball.

Kill out the Gamma Sigma as soon as you can,
But to Drew, at home lend a merciful hand.
Bust George Gould and his old maid aunts,
And help me to get home with Drew's best pants.

KNOCKS—Continued

Bugler Dougan takes a rest

DOUGAN'S PRAYER

While we lie here in silent sleep,
And the bed bugs about us creep,
Let the angels 'round us hover,
And keep Ray from pulling cover.

TOASTS

To Mrs. Meek: Here's to the gladness of her gladness when she is glad.

Here's to the sadness of her sadness when she is sad;
But the gladness of her gladness, and the sadness of her sadness are not in it with the madness of her madness—when she is mad.

Cy's favorite: I asked a girl to marry me, she said: "Go ask Dad;" now she knew that I knew her old Dad was dead, and I knew that she knew what a gay life the old man had led, so she knew that I knew what she meant when she said, "Go ask Dad."

Here's to Mr. Hinemon's talk on "Manners in Public Places," may his life be as long, but his tongue never so dry.

Here's to those we love best, our noble selves.

PAT AND KINSWORTHY

Quoth a little lass
 In the English class,
 "What's the plural of park, Mr. Luten?"
 Quoth the Major, "You're rural—
 It has no plural,
 There's but one Parke worth reputin'."

"A School Girls Reverie"

ON A BALMY day in May, I was sitting by my open window in the study hall. The noon day sun had almost reached its meridian and, in keeping with the spirit of spring time, I was in a better state for dreams than study. The campus, decked in its dress of green, naturally attracted my attention. Without, the stillness was broken only by the songs of the birds, which sang as if they would split their little throats. Within, the only sound that could be heard was the low murmur of voices as the pupils pored over their lessons. But my attention was brought back to the school room, for a little girl was standing by my side. "May I speak?" timidly asked Cora Wilson. I gave her permission and walked over to see what Duncan Williams was doing. He was very busily engaged with his "bean flipper" and was not aware of my presence until I said: "Duncan, give me that 'bean-flipper,' and take your book and go sit on the front seat."

At this time, some one laughed out loud. I turned, and, just as I expected, beheld Mary Meek, the bane of my existence, in paroxysms of laughter. I asked no explanation, for I knew she had played a trick on some girl. I mentally resolved to have her memorize the one hundred and nineteenth Psalm, but I only said: "Mary, report to me after school."

"Teacher," piped John Floyd Mitchell, "John Williams keeps a-pinchin' me and he had better 'cut it out.'"

"Why, John, what do you mean?" said I, "go to that corner and stand there till I tell you to go to your seat."

John picked up his book and mumbled something.

"What did you say?" I asked.

I said Drew Luten stuck a pin in me and I think he ought to have to stand up, too."

"I never did it," said Drew. This was too much. I could not refrain. "Be quiet!" I exclaimed. "John Hinemon, go get me a switch."

But the town clock was striking, the bells ringing, and the classes passing—all these with the bell on Mrs. Meek's desk being very violently tapped, put an end to my reverie, and I arose, and with the rest of the girls marched down into the dining room.

Front Rank—Capt. Higgason, Major Luten, Commandant, Captain Blythe.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS

THE "NON COMS"

MOST peculiar crowd is this made up of those with whom the other boys would not associate. They are seldom fed, and always imposed upon, as shown by their forlorn looks and downcast countenances. They look about as downcast as Jeff Scott, try to be as dignified as Skip Adams, as pious as Deacon Thweatt, and they act about as "luny" as Gar-lip Hogan. The sergeant-major, the high mogul of this motley crew, besides getting himself out of drill, has taught his followers to smoke cigarettes like a locomotive, to devour "star" tobacco like a sausage mill, and to drink (water). However, he has these boys under good control. He never has to call the first sergeant of "A" company down, for not holding his head up, because he always keeps his optics focused on a certain third story window. He can't call the fourth sergeant down, because he is too low-down already. When "squads right about" is given, the fourth sergeant never moves, but lets the company walk over him.

One day a stranger, talking to the sergeant-major, asked why that cow was drilling with "B" company. He replied: "That is no cow, that is the first sergeant.

Another very odd character of this aggregation is the quarter master sergeant. One of his wings was shot off in the "Resolutionary" war, and now, horrible dictum, he is not able to fly.

There is only one man who causes very much trouble, he is the first corporal of "A" company. He insists upon wearing Drew Richardson's trousers instead of his uniform.

Another unruly member of the gang, is the bugler. He has gone "daffy" on the word "hello," or rather Mr. Key's dogs have made him so. He sits on a large stone during the drill, trying to convert his bugle into a megaphone to say "Hello" through, when he goes to see the flower of his heart. He says that she is getting hard of hearing, and then the dogs set up such a mournful howl too.

But with all our short-comings, we are respected by two mighty powers: the Major and ourselves. The first sergeants have an idea that they know more military tactics than anyone on the "pike," just because the captains ask them every evening to take charge of the company.

In conclusion we wish to say that we were afraid that no one else would do us justice, so we wrote our own biography.
